FORTIETH CONGRESS.

The High Court of Impeachment—Mr. Nelson Explains—Proposition for Night Sessions—Mr. Evarts Continues, but Does Not Conclude His Argument.

[By Telegraph to the Pittsburgh Gazette.]

WASHINGTON, April 29, 1868.

SENATE.

Senator SUMNER offered a resolution, that Mr. Nelson having used improper language in this tribunal, calculated to provoke a duel and disrespectful to the Court, he deserved the censure of the Senate.

Senator SHERMAN objected to the consideration of the resolution, and Senator SUMNER objected to Mr. Nelson making any remarks, except in explanation. But the Senate allowed him to read a portion of letters bearing on the question of dates.

Mr. NELSON then explained what purported to be the original letter signed by Messrs. Butler, Logan and Garfield, dated March 9th; also, a letter sent to the President by Chauncy Black, March 16th, enclosing a copy with additional signatures.

Senator CAMERON offered an order for night sessions, which went over.

Mr. EVARTS then resumed his argument. He assumed it to be already shown that this tribunal is a court, and that the President is to be tried only on charges supported by law and evidence, and by common fame. He said much that had been elaborately advanced by the Managers must fall to the ground. So must fall the articles based on charges which had been repeatedly rejected as fair grounds for impeachment. He referred to the conduct of the case by the prosecution as similar to the practice of the Chinese, who make a great noise in the vicinity of an object to be attacked, or like the explosion of some two hundred and fifty tons of gunpowder at a safe distance from the walls of a fort. He said in this case, where the evidence had been suppressed, the enlargement of declamation and invective was more than unusually improper. He also spoke in a strain of sarcasm of Mr. Boutwell's reference to the President's counsel as attorneys whose minds had not been sharpened but enlarged by practice. He then considered Mr. Boutwell's definition of impeachable offences, and argued at length that no action could be so construed which did not proceed from malice and evil intention, supporting his view by quotations from records of the Humphrey trial, and also by the language of Burke in accusing Warren Hastings, when he expressly stated that the assertion and proof of evil intent were indispensable. Mr. Evarts held that the best way to determine the nature of offences which may be deemed high crimes and misdemeanors is to consider the punishments prescribed for them. He referred to the epithets applied by the Managers to punishment of deposition, and in forcible terms described the character and magnitude of the disgrace which such punishment involves. He claimed that the description of the penalties provided in the Tenure-of-Office law for its infraction showed the the comparatively trivial nature of the offense. A maximum but no minimum of punishment is provided. So, in the discretion of Court before whom the indictment should be tried the offender could be let off with a fine of six cents and imprisonment of one day. He read from the debate on this subject at the time when the bill was preposed, in which Mr. Williams and other Senators said there should be no minimum fixed, because the offense might arise from inadvertence and would not probably in any case have a character of moral guilt. Mr. Evarts then considered the general debates on the bill and proposed to prove that the offence charged was not made or to be considered penal, but more of a political nature, and then that even alleged infractions did not take place. He claimed that all belief of the President's former personal turpitude must be laid aside, and it must be considered that he was unimpeachable before twelve o'clock on February 21st. He then argued that even if the removal of Stanton had been actually effected, no change in the relations of the War Department to the rest of the government would have ensued, and hence that the mere act could not be considered as dangerous to the public safety. On the contrary, it would have been benefitted by it, because the relations existing between the President and Mr. Stanton were prejudicial to a proper working of the government. Hence it resulted that the crime consisted in a technical infraction of the law, if it shall be so held. The law applied only in its restrictions to himself. He believed it to be unconstitutional. It relates to an offence not penal, and under these circumstances his action could not be deemed a crime. He then briefly considered the question of what was meant by unconstitutional law, and said it was a paradox. It can be no offence to violate the provisions of such a mere piece of paper. He claimed no greater right for the President than for a private individual to test the constitutionality of a statute. Thus he argued the President made a paper removal, without force and violence, in order to assert his right to act under the Constitution, which, as he believed, was violated by the law in questien. Against the assertion that formal violations are impeachable without reference to intention, he cited authority and argued at some length that the principles of common sense were opposed to any such view. At this point the Court took a recess.

On re-assembling Mr. EVARTS expressed his surprise at the Managers' denunciation of those who peacefully resisted the laws which they deemed unconstitutional. It was the duty of every ministerial officer to raise a question in favor of the Constitution, and in the highest degree it was the duty of the special defender of the Constitution. He referred to the case of Newell against the Auditor of the State of New York, in which the latter successfully resisted the issue of a loan of six millions, also to the New York law imposing a tax on brokers' sales, which was resisted and pronounced void by the United States Supreme Court, and to the action of Mr. Lincoln in suspending the habeas corpus in Florida, in causing the arrest of the Maryland Legislature, and creating Military Commissions in a time of peace. Congress, by endorsing all these acts, confirmed the doctrine that motive must be considered and a mere infraction of law was not in itself a ground for punishment. As to the punishment suggested by Mr. Boutwell as proper for the President, he said if the honorable and astronomical Manager could get over the laws of nature, the Constitution would not stand in his way, for removal from office was prescribed without limit as to the distance to which the culprit should be removed. (Great laughter.) He went on for some time describing in a manner which elicited roars of laughter a supposed flight of Mr. Boutwell as bailiff with the criminal in charge to his hole in the sky.

Mr. Evarts then took up the subject of the position and powers of the President, and held he was the direct representative of the people who elected him, and for whom he held his powers in trust. Evils and disturbances always result from accession to that office of one elected by the people and destitute of personal or political support. This exceptional weakness for the Presidential office is now heightened by extraordinary divisions of party strength in Congress, and so the constitutional safeguards to its independence is unavailing to urge the unequal contest, nor would he claim it to be fatal to the maintenance hereafter of a true position under the Constitution.

Mr. Evarts next spoke of the peculiar situation of the country from which have sprung the present proceedings. He referred to the chaos caused by the rebellion, and to the unprecedented social change wrought by the emancipation of four millions of slaves. He said the questions as to the part to be taken by the different branches of the government, and as to the application of the Constitution and laws in the work of reconstruction, were immensely difficult and readily productive of honest differences of opinion. He dwelt at length on the complication caused by political aspirations, and claimed that all these considerations were motives to avoid or delay the action of impeachment, to cure evils which political action would itself remedy. He referred to an article in the New York Tribune as an example of the feeling entertained by many that impeachment was warranted for political reasons, and argued in refutation of the view thus taken. He held that the essence of the Constitution was the authority of the people, and that its arrangement of the relative powers of the different branches of the Government was based on the idea that terms of authority granted were so short that evils could be patiently endured for a few years until the people could by ballot remedy them.

At this point, four o'clock, the Court and Senate adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Mr. STEVENS offered a resolution that four hundred copies of each of the Constitutions of South Carolina and Arkansas be printed for the use of the House. Referred to Printing Committee.

The House then proceeded to the Senate.

The Trial of Fenians in London—The War Situation in Paraguay, South America.

GREAT BRITAIN.

THE TRIAL OF FENIANS IN LONDON.

LONDON, April 29—Evening.—The trial of Burke, Shaw and Casy, for concern in the Fenian attack on Chester Castle, was resumed this morning.

Mr. Kylock, proprietor of a gun shop in Birmingham, testified he sold to Burke, in December, 1865, a quantity of caps and pistols. He also swore that five hundred rifles were bought by Burke of Mr. Hill, together with moulds for bullets, to the amount of £2,000. Witness, on a searching cross-examination, showed confusion about the identity of Shaw and Casy.

Mr. Hill was sworn and gave evidence confirming that of Kylock, stating also that Burke represented to him that the arms purchased of witness were for use in South America.

Several other witnesses were examined and testified the arms in question were sent from Birmingham to Liverpool. The evidence of a number of lodging house keepers, carmen and others from Liverpool was given which agreed that Burke had, under the name of Winslow, been a resident of that city about the time of the attack on Chester Castle, and proved his intimacy with leading and well known Fenians. The Court adjourned until to-morrow.

THE WAR IN PARAGUAY.

PARIS, April 29.—Terxera De Macedo, Brazilian Ambassador to this Government, has received the following news officially by the steamer which recently arrived at Lisbon from Rio Janeiro: "The Paraguayans are shut up in Humaita. The outer forts have been captured as have also the positions at Curupaity and Paco, and their gunboats sunk. Their President, Lopez, has fled. Humaita cannot hold out three days."

LONDON, April 29.—Further advices from the seat of war from Paraguayan sources state the Brazilian iron clads passed Humaita under fire of its guns. They were assisted in the perilous undertaking by batteries which had been planted by the allied commander around the fortress, and kept up a terrific fire upon the Paraguayans during the passage. The killed and wounded on board the fleet number 1500 men. A reconnoisance had also been made by the allied forces of the position of the Paraguayans, and it was ascertained that Lopez has massed his army at the northern extremity of his lines, which renders probable the abandonment of Curupaity by the Paraguayans.

The Fashions.

[From the N. Y. Evening Post.]

Bonnets are becoming smaller, if possible, and it is not improbable that in a short time they will vanish like the gossamer cloud, and a coiffure of lace and flowers, without frame, be worn instead. The effort to throw aside the Fanchon has not been successful, and it is now the prevailing style, with a slight diadem against which the flowers in front rest.

The ladies are not willing to give up a becoming style for a crown and standing front that detracts from a pretty face. Spangled and crystalized lace, as well as plain white lace, are still much used upon the bonnets, increasing the effect. The fleecy folds of rich lace harmonize with the bright, youthful face, adding to its beauty; while they give a softening effect upon features on which time has left its impress.

Green will be the prevailing color in millinery at present, the bright shade of apple green, which is darker than the Metternich, predominating. The majority of the bonnets are of thin material, crape, illusion or lace. Straws are not extensively used, but most of the fancy braids are very pretty. Straw cords, bands and straw flowers are used for decorating the straw bonnets.

The new style of round hat has a high, sugar-loaf crown, with a brim wider than that of last year. The new hat is of brown straw, the crown sloping up small and flat on the top; the brim wider on one side than the other, turns up, and is spanned by a velvet band. Rosette leaves of ribbon surmount this band, and black crystallized lace caught up by the band and tied in a loose knot, falls over the shoulder. It is a jaunty, pretty hat. The hats with low crown, and narrow, drooping brim, will be worn. A pretty one of white straw, has a fluted ribbon around the crown, and the edge bound with green velvet, with scarf of green frosted lace. A showy round hat is of pink silk, with pink, spangled lace streamers. The wide brim hats will be used later in the season for sea-side wear.

The ribbons used on bonnets are all narrow, the fashionable width being number sixteen. The very narrow is used for ties where lace overstrings are attached to the bonnet. White, straw color, blue, pink and lavender are used to some extent, but the leading color in ribbons is green, and the prettiest and most fashionable shade is the apple green. There has never been a greater variety of flowers, or a more attractive display, which will be much used in decorating bonnets. Indeed, the fashionable bonnet will be made up of lace or tulle, and clusters and wreaths of flowers that drop to the shoulder. Among the recent importations are beautiful vines with trailing tendrils and leaves, and mossy verdure that closely resembles that of the forest.

The little sunshades, or parasols in miniature, are made up of the richest of silk, and are gay and attractive. Parasols are also very showy, the blue, green, and lavender being embroidered in brilliant colors, after beautiful designs, and those in black silk are wrought in white, gold-color, or bright tints. The colored parasols are often edged with white lace that has a pretty effect. Real lace covers are much used over costly parasols, and add to their beauty. For the seaside or country wear, or for real use in the city, there are larger parasols of dark or black silk that are rich and elegant.

Premature Burial.

[From the Israelite.]

The present practice of our people—to bury their dead within some twenty-four or thirty-six hours of their decease—seems reprehensible in many respects. The peril of premature burial is obvious. We know so little of the theory and condition of death, even in our present state of medical science, that we cannot even be sure that life has actually fled when the ordinary signs of life have ceased. We cannot be sure that the spirit has passed irrevocably, materially speaking, from the mortal clay, even when the heart ceases to beat; the lips to breathe, the pulse to throb. We know that persons apparently dead by drowning have been brought back to life a long time after the ordinary signs of life have ceased to be apparent. We know that skillful treatment has, under Providence, restored respiration and animation some time after all apparent action had left the respiratory organs and the animated organism. Hence it is clear that death does not immediately succeed the apparent cessation of life. A man may be drowned and yet not immediately die. If this be the case in this cause of death, may it not be true in other causes producing death? May not the vital power be only suspended and not absolutely extinct when it appears to those around a patient's pillow that the signs of life have departed?

It is possible that we can, in the name of religion, consign our loved ones to a condition in which—if one spark of life remain or could be reanimated in them—it must be extinguished utterly, irretrievably? I believe that decomposition, or the beginning of decomposition, is the only really reliable sign of death. When a physical change of this character commences to affect the inert frame, it is probably palpable that the mystery which we call life has left it—left it until it be recalled in the unknown hour when, as we believe, the dead shall wake again.

Strange to say, we do not give to our supposed dead the last chance which would be afforded by our ancient customs, and probably prescribed rites. We do not, as I believe our fathers did, re-open the coffin at the burial ground, before finally parting with it in the cold sods. Why have we abandoned this practice—possibly a wise precaution?

The objection to burial, on the ground of the desire to remove the dead rapidly from the house of mourning, so that the latter may be purified from its presence, may be met by the establishment of a mortuary house in our cemeteries, in which for some days the supposed dead might be deposited and watched, till death be physically certain.

THE Copperhead majority of the Ohio Legislature have hit upon a new but eminently appropriate method of cutting down the Republican vote in that State. They have introduced a bill which provides that no pupil of an institution of learning shall be allowed to vote unless his parents have an actual residence in the township in which the college is located. By this means they expect to disfranchise several thousand students who under existing laws are voters, and of whom four-fifths have supported the Republican ticket. One of the members who voted for this bill, when traveling abroad, wrote home to have his letters directed to "——— ———, Eurip." Among the pictures which now adorn his "palatial mansion" is one labeled "An Oshun (Ocean) Landskip." Evidently, Democracy has good reason to consider education its foe.

Origin of Westminster Abbey.

In one respect, Westminster Abbey stands alone among the buildings of the world. As time has rolled on, a fresh nucleus of life—or rather of death—has been formed within it, a new combination produced, a larger ramification thrown out. First, it was only kings who found their last home within its sacred walls; then nobles and ministers of state; and last, the true great ones of the land, whose valor saved or whose genius enriched it. The Abbey, as everybody knows, owes its origin to the piety of Edward the Confessor, of whom a very full description has been given by his cotemporaries—and this is the portrait which Dean Stanley has compiled from their materials. His appearance was such as no one could forget. It was almost that of an albino. His full, flush, rose-red cheeks strangely contracted with the milky whiteness of his waving hair and beard. His eyes were always fixed on the ground. There was a kind of a magic charm to his thin white hands, and his long, transparent fingers, which not unnaturally led to the belief that there resided in them a healing power of stroking away the diseases of his subjects. His manners presented a singular mixture of gravity and levity.

Unusually affable and gentle, so as to make even a refusal look like an acceptance, he burst forth at times into a fury which showed that the old Bersiker rage was not dead within him. "By God and His mother, I will give you just such another turn, if it ever come in my way!" was the utterance of what was thought by his biographers as a very mild expression of his noble indignation against a peasant who interfered with the pleasure of his chase. Austere as were his habits—old even as a child—he sometimes startled his courtiers by a piece of boisterous laughter, for which they or he could only account by some curious vision which had passed across his mind without their knowledge. His time was almost equally divided between devotional exercises and hunting. He would spend hours in church, and then again days together in hawking and cheering on his hounds.

When in exile in Normandy, Edward had thrown himself on the protection of his favorite saint, St. Peter, and swore that if his affairs succeeded, he would make a pilgrimage to that apostle's grave in Rome; and when he came to the throne he announced his intention of proceeding thither. But his great council would not let him leave the kingdom, far less risk the perils of the Roman brigands—who, it seems, have been by far the most permanent institution in Italy—so a deputation was sent to the Pope to beg a release from his vow. The release came on condition that he should found a monastery, and accordingly the "Collegiate Church or Abbey of St. Peter" was founded, which is much more commonly known as Westminster Abbey. When Edward died, he was of course laid in this temple of his own creation, attired in his own royal habiliments, his crown upon his head, a crucifix of gold, with a golden chain, round his neck, and the pilgrim's ring on his hand; and there, we are well assured, his dust reposes to this day.

Swords.

In all nations of the east the warrior looks upon his sword with feelings of strong devotion. Those wielded by himself on many a gory field are preserved with an affectionate care, while those captured from his enemy are hung away as trophies, and both pass from generation to generation as heirlooms, along with the ancestral halls. Spain has provided a national museum for weapons of war of all kinds, and in looking along its walls the student reads with unerring precision the dates of all her glory and disaster, from the ninth century onward. There hang the rude weapons of the forefathers, and the polished subtle blades of the modern cavalier. The tomahawk of the American Indian, the defensive weapons of the Montezumas and the Incas, hang side by side with the keen blades of the Saracen. The Moorish warrior held his sword in high reverence. The Damascus blade, his choicest weapon, was the type of Mohamedan civilization. How it was manufactured has always been a subject of inquiry, which has only ended in hypothesis. Some attribute its superior quality to the character of the steel, others to the peculiar quality of the Syrian water used for hardening them, still others to superior workmanship. The truth may be that all these theories are united in its production. Aside from the inherent qualities of the blade, the Orientals looked upon its peculiar wavy finish with the greatest gratification. The process by which this appearance of the dappled heavens was produced is called Damascening, and it also is wrapped in mystery. On many of the old swords captured in the Mores, in Syria, and in Africa, are engraved those memorable words of the Koran; "There is no God but God, and Mahomet is his prophet."

Before a blade thus ornamented the faithful Moor bowed in adoration, and the effect was to keep up in the army a perpetual religious enthusiasm, which rendered the soldier's stroke bolder, and kept his valor undaunted. The Spanish sword was ornamented and polished equal to the Moorish. The religious zeal of Spain during her American conquests seems to have been transferred to her weapons of war. History and creed appeared on her swords, on her halberds and pikes, in cabalistic characters, in artistic hieroglyphics. The skill and wealth of both these people were lavished upon their weapons, and now Spain preserves them, so that posterity may, in her galleries, read the chapters of her greatness along with those of her decadence.

FROM the report of Mr. Welles, of the Internal Revenue Department, it seems that there are about one hundred and thirty thousand (130,000) places licensed for the sale of liquor, or one for fifty-eight families. This traffic employs about 390,000 persons. The value of retail liquor sales for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1867, was the enormous sum of one billion, four hundred and eighty-three millions four hundred and ninety-one thousand eight hundred and sixty-five dollars ($1,483,491,865). That is $43 for every man, woman and child in the country. It is more than the entire product of the precious metals in all the States and Territories west of the Rocky Mountains for the last twenty years.

THE Springfield (O.) Republic says that the Hon. Samuel Shellabarger has been entirely cured of the disease with which he has been so long afflicted, and needs now only a brief interval for the recruiting of the strength and vigor necessary for the performance of his public duties.

The Pittsburgh Gazette.

SPRING.

BY CHARLES KINGSLEY.

See the land, her Easter keeping,
Rises as her Maker rose.
Seeds, so long in darkness sleeping,
Burst at last from winter snows.
Earth with heaven above rejoices;
Fields and gardens hail the Spring:
Shaughs and woodlands ring with voices,
While the wild birds build and sing.

You, to whom your Maker granted
Powers to those sweet birds unknown,
Use the craft by God implanted;
Use the reason not your own.
Here, while heaven and earth rejoices,
Each his Easter tribute bring.—
Work of finger, chant of voices,
Like the birds who build and sing.

—Brignoli is followed about by an admiring beauty. Music must have charms to make the most unprepossessing looking of men fascinating in some eyes.

—The London Times says that at the recent race between Oxford and Cambridge; Cambridge only came in second because there was no third boat in the water.

—Baron De Budberg has been succeeded by Count De Stackelberg in the Russian Embassy at Paris. Queer names those Russians have—Bedburg and Straddleburg.

—Madam Parepa Rosa has sailed for California. It is believed that there is no truth in the report that she had chartered one vessel of each line to take her out in installments.

—Somebody in New York advertises for a medical diploma. He must be a very poor excuse for a man who can not get the degree of M. D., or any other D., out of some adolescent college.

—A circus manager advertised that "the hero of one hundred summersaults" would soon appear in Chicago. Immediately the general impression was that Senator Doolittle was coming.

—Senator Grimes, of Iowa, has given ten thousand dollars towards founding a public library in Burlington, which town is evidently rejoicing in the fact that Old Grimes is not dead yet.

—Prentice is probably the most vulgar funniest before the public, although he is not so coarse as Pomeroy. Both are down on Forney, which is very flattering indeed to that gentleman.

—Seventy-five hundred Saxon and Prussian emigrants have passed through New York, during the past few days. Emigration from the port of Bremen has never been on so extensive a scale as this year.

—The Havanese have gone raving mad about Ristori, there never was such an ovation vouchsafed to an actress as that bestowed on the Queen of Tragedy at the farewell performance of "Sor Teresa" on Friday night.

—Chicago may again hide her diminished head. Connecticut has outdone her on the divorce question. We do not believe there was ever any place else so absurd a conglomeration of disgusting particulars as is contained in the great Judd case.

—An allopathic Medical college is to be founded in Detroit, $20,000 have been subscribed by Detroit physicians. If a sufficient sum to found the college is procured, the medical department of the university of Michigan will be transferred to it.

—Mrs Gladstone rushed into the lobby and kissed her husband, after his Irish Church speech. Suppose she had made a mistake and Mr. D'Israeli had received the salute, what a commotion would have been made by the English female lobbyists.

—Most women when they take to the offensive, use their nails! Mrs. Gillan, who lives in Chicago, differs from the rest of her sex; she took a hammer and pounded her husband's head. If she had driven one of her nails into his head she would have resembled Jael, as it was she only went to jail.

—A lady in Maine after writing very enthusiastically about General Hancock, says that he is one of those men whom armies idolize, and then says that General Grant is not. General McClellan was one of that kind, but it didn't keep him from repudiating his idolators and running on an anti-war ticket.

—We shouldn't be much surprised if King George of Hanover came over to America to live. Austria has told him to truss up his fardles and depart, and we don't see why he shouldn't come to New York to reside. It is a much pleasanter town than London, which seems to be about the only other place left for the royal exile.

—It is supposed that the Lelands have entered into a grand conspiracy to buy up and gain possession of all of the hotels in the country. Their latest acquisition is Taylor's hotel in Jersey City. The Metropolitan in New York is the biggest thing they have, and they would have plenty more if it were not for the Stetsons, who seem to be conspiring for the same purpose.

—Mayor Blackmore, like most of our other Mayors, has inaugurated his term of office by insisting on the sidewalks being cleaned occasionally. This is, of course, praiseworthy, and should be kept up, as it is in other cities; but a change could still be made for the better. It is very annoying to be splashed and sprinkled at all hours of the day whilst passing along the streets, and yet at present every one is liable to sudden shower baths at any time. In some of the Eastern towns, where the pavement cleaning law is enforced, the people are not allowed to clean between the hours of eight in the morning and seven in the evening, and by these means clean sidewalks are achieved and the water annoyance avoided during the greater part of the day. An amendment of this sort would, we think, be gratefully received by very many citizens.

RIVER NEWS.

The fine packet Kate Robinson, Capt. R. Robinson, is announced for Cincinnati and Louisville. She will leave with dispatch.

The Wild Duck Barges, Capt. Anawalt, is also announced for St. Louis forthwith. The Mary Davage will have her repairs finished to-day, and will leave for St. Louis to-morrow. Her barges are at Steubenville taking out nails.

The Glendale, Capt. Hare, is filling up steadily for St. Louis and the Upper Mississippi, and the Kate Robinson, Captain Robinson, is announced for Cincinnati and Louisville.

The splendid side-wheel packet J. N. McCullough, Capt. Moore, leaves Thursday at 12 m. for Cincinnati and Way points. To persons going that way a fine opportunity is presented.

Business on the landing was dull—freights being scarce to all points.

The river continues to fall, the Monongahela marks indicating four feet six inches. It was reported raining at Oil City yesterday. This may bring a rise in the Allegheny.

Several steamers are between this port and Wheeling, including the R. C. Gray and Wheeling.

Tuesday's Cincinnati Commercial says: The Maggie Hays and Alice V., from Pittsburgh, Armadillo, from St. Louis, were the only departures outside of the daily packets. The St. Charles, for Pittsburgh, was the only departure outside the local packets. The Maggie Hays departed for St. Louis full of freight and people. The Emma No. 3 will arrive from St. Louis today on her way to Pittsburgh.

Business was very dull along the levee yesterday, as is usually the case on Monday. One-half of the Natoma has been sold at Memphis to Captain James Lee for $4,500. She will be laid up for a few weeks and undergo a thorough overhauling, preparatory to resuming her place in the Friar's Point trade. The Charles Bowen arrived from the Kanawha yesterday, with seven barges of cannel coal, one barkboat, one corn-boat, and two wood-boats. The Bowen returns to-day with a tow of nine empty barges.

NASHVILLE, April 27.—River rising with thirteen feet on Harpeth Shoals. Rain this morning but clear to-night. Arrived—Tyrone, from Cairo. In port—Umpire, W. White and Tyrone.

ST. LOUIS, April 27.—The river is falling here quite rapidly—eight inches per day. All the upper rivers continue declining, with a fair stage of water in each. The lists of steamboat arrivals and departures continue liberal, imparting a busy aspect to the wharf. The total number of arrivals of steamers during the past forty-eight hours was eighteen, comprising seven from the Upper Mississippi, two from the Lower Mississippi, one from the Missouri, four from the Illinois, and four from the Ohio. The Messenger passed on to Pittsburgh after a short delay. The Importer was loaded to her guards. The Leonidas brought a full trip of freight as passengers.

Tuesday's Cincinnati Gazette says: Capt. A. Q. Ross is in the city. He says that members of Congress appear to be exceedingly ignorant of the perils of river navigation. One member that he conversed with thought that if a boat or two was a 100 feet wide, a bridge span of 150 feet would be ample. No accounts is taken of the effects of cross currents, &c. He also states that our Representatives will be governed in their action and influence by the recent action of the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce, favoring a 500 feet span of bridges.

The steamer Westmoreland, Captain E. Evans, was announced to leave Cincinnati for New Orleans on Tuesday evening. The St. Charles, Capt. Dravo, left Cincinnati for this port on Monday evening with a fine trip. So says the Cincinnati papers.

The Dubuque Herald, of Saturday, says: The Sheridan cleared for St. Louis Thursday night with one of the heaviest trips of the season. She arrived here with 7,000 sacks of grain on her, and took from here a barge containing 2,000 sacks and 100 barrels of flour, about all the freight she wanted, and departed, drawing four and a feet of water.

The Vicksburg Times says the "champion" Robt. E. Lee has made her last Vicksburg trip for the present, and that her future movements had not been determined. The Governor Allen is running in her place. It is not improbable that the Lee will be posted for St. Louis, under the direction of Captain John W. Cannon. The Times says the Mississippi remained at Vicksburg repairing boilers. The insignificant loss of a few hours is far preferable to a boiler explosion, or even the risk of having one. The Dora is on her way to Pittsburgh from New Orleans, loaded nearly to her guards. The Vicksburg Times says: "Captain Tom Leathers thinks the Quitman is second in point of speed to no boat plying the waters of the Mississippi river, always excepting the acknowledged 'champion.' Captain Tom Tobin, with 'the famous Pargoud,' will have to be on the look out next Saturday, for the 'war horse' will be very apt to come up the coast in a hurry unless she has a big trip of freight, and that will be something very improbable."

The Memphis Appeal actually says that Captain DeHaven's earnest efforts in trying to reduce the cost of transportation on the Father of Waters by building a steamer of large capacity, and at the same time economizing labor, etc., will make the Captain's name immortal. If that is so, we could name several otther immortals lying around loose.

MISCEL. DOCKET.

[L. CLAIR DENNY, over land then owned by him, twelve feet wide; that A. P. OSGOOD, A. H. ENGLISH and G. W. LYON are at present the owners in the soil over which said alley has been laid out; that said alley has never been opened or used by the public, &c., and praying that the Court decree the vacation of said alley; whereupon the Court made the following order:

And now, to wit, April 18th, 1868, upon the petition of A. M. Marshall, C. A. Carpenter, Van B. Fowler, Albert Stright, John Orr, Marchall Heinle, John Atwell, C. P. Marthens, John Frazier, S. P. Shriver, B. Bakewell, Jr., J. W. GENERAL SCHOFIELD authorizes the statement that the President nominated him to be Secretary of War without even intimating that he desired to do so. He has written a letter declining to accept the nomination.

A WASHINGTON letter says of Mr. GROESBECK'S argument in the President's behalf that "he did not acquit ANDREW JOHNSON, but he probably made himself BEN WADE'S successor in the Senate, in case the latter becomes President." They say, however, at Columbus, that the Ohio Democracy have already assigned the seat to Mr. JEWETT, of Zanesville.

WHEN ARRAIGNED the other day by Lord Derby, in Parliament, for vacillations and inconsistencies in his views of Irish policy, an eminent English statesman had the manly courage to avow that the peace of the Empire was the aim of his life, and that, preferring his own plan, he had accepted another as, under the circumstances, the most practicable solution of the Irish difficulties. It would be a good thing for our own Republic, if its leading statesmen and politicians were more frequently found daring to emulate the moral courage of EARL RUSSELL.

FLORIDA will vote early in May, and no serious opposition to the success of Reconstruction is anticipated. The Virginia election, which had been ordered for June, has been postponed by General SCHOFIELD, in consequence of the exhaustion of the funds appropriated by Congress. The difficulty will be speedily remedied and a new order of election issued. General SCHOFIELD'S recent visit to Washington is understood to have been for the purpose of arranging with General GRANT the details of a plan to submit the new Constitution to the people of this State, in separate parts, in order to obviate any existing danger of the defeat of an instrument which, as an entirety, is most wisely framed, by the injudicious and unpopular disfranchising clause, upon which his opinions were submitted ineffectively to the Convention before its adjournment.

◆

THE PROTRACTED speech-making by counsel is likely to answer a very good purpose, in developing, among Senators, an evident impatience of further needless delays. It was voted, the other day, by 30 to 19, that fifteen minutes in debate was too much to concede to each Senator upon each article or separate proposition. A proposition to give to each Senator half an hour and no more in the final deliberation, was also lost by 34 to 16. Although the subject was then laid aside, to be again brought up after the conclusion of the arguments, the present decision as to the length of Senatorial discussions, is not likely to be changed. As it stands, each Senator will have fifteen minutes for explanation of his vote, on all of the articles, and no more. This will make a decision of impeachment attainable within a two days' discussion. Embarrassing questions may arise as to the extent of the penalty—whether it shall, or not, include disqualification for election to any Federal office—and also as to the mode of agreeing upon a verdict and of pronouncing judgment, but it is believed that Senators have already reached conclusions upon these points, and that no additional delays will result from them. It is worthy of note that the wide latitude of speculation in which the public have indulged, and the restless feeling of uncertainty which has been insidiously cultivated by the President's friends, are entirely due to the reticence of the Senate. And that reserve has been most commendable.

GEN. HANCOCK is fast gaining ground with influential Democrats as a Presidential candidate, and the indications are now that Mr. PENDLETON, who, sixty days since, would have secured the nomination almost without an effort, will find a dangerous competitor in his military rival. The postponement of the Convention to so late a period as July is found seriously detrimental to Mr. PENDLETON'S prospects, and he is palpably losing strength daily, while new and formidable combinations are forming in behalf of the less objectionable candidate. The General's official agency in the hanging of Mrs. SURRATT is apparently less objectionable to an influential wing of the Democracy, than the practical repudiation with which PENDLETON leads the assault upon their pockets. Nor is the Ohio politician's war-record altogether acceptable to the shrewder Democratic leaders. Disguise it as they may attempt to, these gentlemen cannot wholly conceal their hankering desire for a candidate whose loyal military services shall lend a valuable aid in obscuring the popular remembrance of copperhead disloyalty in the trying period of public danger. If they did not help us fight the battles, they are cheerfully prompt in snatching at the fruits of victory. Democratic politicians are dissatisfied with the postponement of their National Convention to July, and a plan is on foot to induce their Executive Committee to change the call and fix an early day in June for its meeting.

SPEAKING of frauds in the collection of the whisky excise, the New York Times pays to New Jersey a handsome compliment as follows:

> Some of the New Jersey districts were at one time quite as bad as any in this city. The change for the better in that State is attributed entirely to changes made in the local revenue offices and to the firm and noble stand taken by the Federal Court in that State. Rogues have received no quarter there. They have been arrested, tried, convicted and punished to the full extent of the law. And the result is seen there in the entire diaappearance of fraud in regard to the whisky tax, from that State.

If the revenue officials and prosecuting officers were everywhere as zealous and faithful as in New Jersey, in ferreting out frauds, and subjecting them to imprisonment, Commissioner WELLES' estimate of fifty millions revenue from the whisky tax this year would be more than realized. So far as the paragraph above quoted would convey an impression that the Federal Courts are responsible for the non-administration of the law, it is correct only in a very limited sense. Fidelity in enforcing penal laws and the measure of punishment inflicted upon offenders are practically dependent, in a very great degree, upon the efficiency and integrity of the prosecuting officers, whose representations and influence, direct and indirect, in other ways, are usually potent with the sitting judge.

OUR EARLY HISTORY.

It is nearly eighty years since, in this journal, appeared the following account of the operations of the Indians of the Ohio valley. The Pittsburgh GAZETTE, of May 26th, 1787, says:

> "A gentleman, who arrived here the 19th instant, "from Lime Stone, which place he left the 1st of "May, informs us that seven warriors of the Shaw-"anese nation had come on there, on the 27th of "April, with nine white people to exchange for the "same number of Indian prisoners taken by Col. "Logan. The Chief of these savages, Captain "Wolf, gave the gentlemen to understand that thir-"ty warriors of the Cherokee nation were then out "at war. Our informant adds, that as he came up "the river, he saw five bark canoes and three rafts "cross the Scioto, full of Indians."

Mrs. Eva Jessup, who died at Fairview, Indiana township, on Monday afternoon, was perhaps the last remaining resident of the county who had a personal acquaintance with the history of that period. When the paragraph above quoted was first printed in the GAZETTE, Mrs. JESSUP, then Miss JONES, was in her sixteenth year, and living in a cabin located a little west of the present site of the Penitentiary, in Allegheny City. Mrs. JESSUP has always declared that she was born in that cabin, and, as she was some years older than the late General ROBINSON, there have been many to insist that she, and not the General, was "the first white child born west of the Allegheny river."

PETROLEUM AND ITS TAX.

One of the commercial marvels of modern times is the sudden development of the Petroleum trade, a business which, like Minerva springing fully armed from the brain of Jove, at one bound has attained an almost world-wide diffusion and importance. Eight years ago the article was unknown to commerce, and yet, in 1867, the exports to foreign countries of Refined Petroleum footed up the large amount of nearly 1,700,000 barrels. In the same year the amount of Crude Petroleum produced is estimated at about 3,000,000 barrels. This immense business is almost solely confined to Western Pennsylvania, and our own city has contributed more than any other to develope and foster this wonderful traffic. At the first discovery of the oleaginous treasure, our capitalists, with an unwonted prescience and enterprise, determined to draw the new business to Pittsburgh, and forthwith erected, as if by magic, a large number of refineries until, at this time, three millions of dollars are invested in buildings and stocks in this neighborhood alone.

As Pennsylvanians, therefore, but more particularly as Pittsburghers, we are peculiarly interested in a business which has contributed so much to develope the resources of our Commonwealth, and as citizens of the United States, we are anxious to foster a manufacture which has contributed so largely to make up the deficit in our exports of cereals and cotton. From twenty to thirty millions of dollars are annually placed to our credit abroad in return for our shipments of this single article. As Pittsburghers we take great pride in meeting the productions of our city, and the imprint of its name, throughout the cities of Europe, in the depths of Africa, on the black steppes of Russia, the gold plains of California, or the fragrant fields of the celestial Empire. Turk and Arab, Chinese and Patagonian, Hindoo and Japanese, Frenchman and German alike enjoy the cheap and beautiful illuminator which Pennsylvania wells produce and Pittsburgh Refineries utilize.

No production of the labor or ingenuity of man is more deserving of the encouragement and protection of Government, yet none has been more persistently hunted down and discriminated against, from the earliest development of the trade. Impressed with the idea that the "rivers of oil" were veritable Pactolian streams, our Legislators have charged Petroleum with an undue proportion of the public burdens. Most unfairly it has been singled out from the class of general manufactures, and placed in the list of luxuries, which may be legislated against, and, from the first has been heavily taxed, amounting for the last two years to one hundred per cent. Recently this has been reduced to fifty per cent. of the value, and such a reduction might seem sufficient to those not acquainted with the great interests involved. What reason there is for placing a fifty per cent. tax on the poor man's light where the rich man's gas is charged but five or seven per cent. we cannot see. A beneficent Government should reverse this order of things and lay its burdens on those most able to bear them. It is justly claimed that the business of exploring the oil field, and that of preparing its products for use, are the most uncertain and hazardous of all our mining and manufacturing operations, and demand encouragement and protection rather than adverse and oppressive legislation. Why should it not simply be placed in the category of useful manufactures instead of being outlawed like whisky? For what reason should it not be treated in the same manner as we treat the mining of coal, or iron, or copper? Why discriminate against a business that is more uncertain in its results than either of these, and equally as useful?

Should it be said that Pittsburgh need not complain, for the reason that our product is mainly exported and therefore free of tax, we answer that, whilst nominally free, the existence of the tax requires a system of most embarrassing and expensive regulations, which imposes a heavy burden on the business, and at the same time contributes nothing to the Government. This, too, at a time when the European refiner can come into our markets, purchase the crude article and, by means of cheap labor, cheap chemicals and a good market for Naptha, drive the American refiner out of the foreign markets.

Should our Government foster this important branch of American manufactures, or should it continue to embarrass the business by unreasonable and expensive regulations, until it has driven the trade into the hands of foreigners? It seems to us that every unnecessary obstacle should be taken out of the way, and every reasonable encouragement extended to a business which contributes so largely to the development of our national resources, to the maintenance of our national credit, and to the comfort and happiness of the world.

Use of Stimulants.

Dr. Willard Parker, in a recent address before the Young Men's Christian Association of New York, discussed the subject of stimulants at some length. He said:

> The five chief stimulants are: tea, coffee, alcohol, opium, tobacco.
>
> Stimulants when taken in a liquid form, go at once into the blood, and of course operate promptly upon the tissues of all parts of the body. Tea and coffee stimulate, alcohol, opium and tobacco poison.
>
> Some persons can use both tea and coffee with impunity; a few coffee, but not tea; a good many tea, but not coffee. Tea and coffee used in moderation do not shorten life, used in excess they do, however, producing great nervous irritability and exhaustion.
>
> Milk and sugar ought to be used with both tea and coffee. Their nutriment appears to protect the system against over stimulus.
>
> Man will have something to drink besides water. He is a drinking animal. The thing required, therefore, is only that he drink what shall not harm him. There need be no quarrel with pure lager beer and pure light wines, used in moderation. California wines are from very sweet grapes, therefore fermentation (which changes sugar into alcohol) makes them strongly alcoholic and intoxicating.
>
> The liquors now drank are poisonous. I have not seen a case of delirium tremens in hospital for years. There used to be such, but now such patients come in crazy—raving; from the effects, not of alcohol, but of adulterated liquors.
>
> As between tea and coffee on one hand, and alcohol on the other, a certain good man in New York used to say that "he was always glad to find that a young man liked tea and coffee, because then he was not likely to become fond of alcoholic drinks." Again, tea and coffee retard the processes of waste in the system, and thus enable the two nervous systems to furnish working power to the body for a longer time. Alcohol has no such power.
>
> Opium-eating rapidly increases in America. The effects of it are well known, yet its use does not necessarily shorten life. Opium used as a stimulant gives very pleasurable sensations for the time, but these are followed by a corresponding depression, a slough of exhaustion and misery which continues until the pleasure is brought back by the use of a little more opium than before.
>
> The moderate use of tobacco does not necessarily kill; but it cannot be said that the moderate use of it is harmless.
>
> Perhaps tobacco is not quite so bad as rum, but they are twin brothers, and tobacco makes men drink. Tobacco depresses, and the user then craves liquor to stimulate him. It is found impossible to cure inebriate patients of the use of liquor so long as they are allowed to use tobacco. The French public revenue from tobacco from 1812 to 1832 was annually $5,600,000, of late years it is $36,000,000. During the former period there were in France at any given time 8,000 lunatics and paralytics, now there are 44,000.
> It will be seen that the two totals increase in nearly an even ratio—six and a half times as much tobacco, five and a half times as much lunacy and paralysis. Those who live out doors may use tobacco without feeling it so much; but not men of sedentary life. There have died in New York within a few years three excellent clergymen, all of whom would now be alive had they not used tobacco. The difference in the operation of tobacco and alcohol is this, while alcohol causes tangible changes in certain organs, tobacco gradually lowers the vital tone of the whole system, so that the life ends sooner than it ought to.

MESSRS. ALEXANDER MCDONALD and B. F. Rice are the United States Senators elect from Arkansas. The former is a native of Pennsylvania, about thirty-six years of age, and for several years did business as a banker and merchant in Kansas. At the close of the war he settled at Little Rock, Arkansas, and he is now President of the First National Bank of that place. He has been elected for the short term. Mr. Rice was born in Kentucky, but early in life migrated to Minnesota, where he obtained some eminence as a lawyer. At the breaking out of the war he was commissioned a captain in the Third Minnesota Infantry, but resigned while the regiment was in Arkansas, and took up his residence at Little Rock, for the purpose of practising law. Though an uncompromising Union man, he is said to be opposed to negro suffrage.

THE GERMAN EXPATRIATION TREATY.

The annexed portion of a dispatch from Minister BANCROFT, to the State Department, dated Berlin, April 3d, will be of interest to our readers. It is observed that the provisions of the treaty are construed, by the German Diet and by the Chancellor, BISMARCK, as a most complete declaration of the change of nationality by the act of foreign naturalization. Mr. BANCROFT says:

> Yesterday the treaty came up for acceptance in the Imperial Diet. Mr. Konig, in the first instance, and then Count Bismarck, took the occasion, publicly, and in the clearest and most emphatic manner, to confirm my interpretation in every particular.
>
> A discussion arose, which brought out a full interpretation of its several articles. Mr. Konig, the plenipotentiary who signs the treaty on the part of North Germany, in explanation of the first article, said that a five years' continuous residence in America, and no more, was all that the treaty required in regard to residence.
>
> The Chancellor of the Confederation, Count Bismarck, spoke on the same point, declaring that the words of the article were too plain to be misunderstood; that the period of five years was to date from the moment when the emigrant should cross the American line, and that the continuity of residence which was required was to be interpreted, "Nicht in korporelichem soudern in jurisliscbem sinne," not in a corporeal but in a legal sense. The interpretation of the second article of the treaty was equally explicit.
>
> Dr. Schleiden, of the Committee of the Diet, reported that inasmuch as the liability of the naturalized citizen on his return to his original country extended only to breaches of law committed before emigration, it followed that any breach of the law which might be committed by itself was excluded from the class of punishable actions. The view was confirmed by Mr. Konig, who pointed out that as the emigrant remained liable only for acts committed before emigration, emigration itself, and the consequent withdrawal from military duty, could not be included among such acts. So then, said Mr. Lowe, one of the ablest members of the Diet, and well known as a long and esteemed resident of New York, the hateful military business is now put aside, and the emigrant on his return is not liable to arrest for the violation of the military duty from which he had withdrawn by emigration.
>
> While he fully accepted the explanation of Mr. Konig, Mr. Lowe still intimated a wish that it might be confirmed by Count Bismarck himself.
>
> The Chancellor immediately arose, and replied as follows: The gentleman who has last spoken fears that a person who has lived five years in America and been naturalized there may yet, on his return here, be held to military duty. This apprehension I can designate as perfectly and absolutely unfounded; the literal observation of the treaty includes in itself that those whom we are bound to acknowledge as American citizens cannot be held to military duty in North Germany. That is the main purpose of the treaty.
> Whosoever emigrates bona fide with the purpose of residing permanently in America shall meet with no obstacle on our part to his becoming an American citizen, and his bona fides will be assumed when he shall have passed five years in that country, and, renouncing his North German nationality, shall have become an American citizen. I believe, therefore, that no room has been left open for the anxiety that has been expressed, and I lay great stress upon the placing of the subject in its true light
> Dr. Lowe questioned the Chancellor on this point once more, saying: "To my joy I think I may understand the Chancellor to say that no prosecution for unauthorized emigration can take place, even if the emigrant shall have ceased to be an American citizen."
>
> Count Bismarck replied: "I herewith confirm the declaration which the gentleman desires," and he added, joyfully in form, seriously in substance, "I might also assert that we will treat the five years absence in America, when connected with naturalization, as a fulfilment of the military duty with the North German Confederation."
>
> The fourth article of the treaty came also under consideration.
>
> Mr. Lasker, one of the ablest members of the Diet, inquired whether the German, naturalized in America and returning to Germany, would, after two years' residence in Germany, be held liable to military duty? The text of the treaty, he said, gave no color to such an interpretation, but the report of the Council of Confederation was ambiguous, and, therefore, he called upon the Chancellor for a clearer explanation.
>
> In the beginning of the debate, ex-Consul Mayor had most clearly explained that the American law required from the person who became naturalized a total revocation of his allegiance to any other power, holding fast to this fact.
>
> Count Bismarck replied that the German-American citizen, on resuming his relation as a citizen of North Germany, would, within the treaty, stand in the light of a foreigner emigrating into North Germany; that he could not be held to the discharge of any old military duty, but only to such new military duty as would attach to every foreigner emigrating into North Germany and becoming naturalized there.
>
> All the proceedings were marked by the disposition to cherish more friendly relations with the United States.
>
> On the fourth article I will add a few words. The American law exacts from the citizen who becomes naturalized a perpetual renunciation by oath of his former nationality. Hitherto the Prussian government has made no formal recognition of our naturalization laws, but now that it becomes bound by treaty to respect them, it would not have restored the returning American German to his German citizenship had not the consent of the United States to his release from his obligation to them been given, as it is given by the fourth article of this treaty.
> I remain, sir, yours sincerely,
> GEORGE BANCROFT.
> WILLIAM H. SEWARD, Esq., Secretary of State, &c.

THE Central Pacific Railroad has been operated on both slopes of the Sierra Nevada mountains during April. Passengers and freight are hauled by wagons around the incomplete gap of six miles at the east end of the summit tunnel, when they again take the cars down to the Big Meadows of the Truckee, one hundred and fifty miles east of Sacramento. The track is meanwhile being graded at the foot of the mountains, and so soon as the spring rains admit the line will be pushed rapidly forward across the plains to the Humboldt Valley. It is expected three hundred miles will be in operation in August.

THE Hudson Highland Suspension Bridge bill has become a law. The bridge is proposed to be located at or near Fort Montgomery in the Highlands, and is on the line and of course in connection with the Erie and New England Railroad, to be constructed from Turner's on the Erie Railway, to Derby in the State of Connecticut—therefore crossing the Hudson River road as well as all the north and south roads between those points.

Darwinian Ideas.

Mr. Darwin has published two more volumes on the "Variation of Plants and Animals under Domestication," to confirm his theory that the different forms of animal and vegetable life have been produced by natural law, and not by creative acts. The conclusions of Mr. Darwin may be reduced to four:

1. All animals, especially domestic animals, have a tendency to great variations of form; and artificial selection depends for its operation on this fact.
2. Many forms of animals and plants, not in existence in nature, but derived from natural types, are called into existence by man.
3. These are produced by artificial selection; by a careful observation of individual variations, which are selected for breeding; and these are preserved till they are perpetuated as specific characters.
4. Breeds, which are thus introduced by artificial selection, show differences of external form and of internal structure, which would warrant a naturalist, ignorant of their origin, to call them distinct species, or sometimes even distinct genera.

Prof. Agassiz is the leading opponent of Mr. Darwin's theory. He asserts that species are immutable; that man can originate breeds, but never species; and that breeds are fruitful in offspring, but species, if crossed, are barren, or have sterile offspring. He claims, also, that in the whole range of observation in living nature, or in fossil history, no instance has been found of transmutation of species. Where such eminent naturalists are at variance, who can decide the controversy?

American Cities.

The London Atheneum remarks in the course of a review of a recent American volume:

> Baltimore will live in the traveler's mind as a city of lovely girls, of passionate song, and of perfect terrapin. It will keep its place, when things of higher interest may have passed away, by the color of its streets, by the dash of its people, by the heat of its pavement, by the frolic of its quays. Other cities of the Union have their charms. Boston is very massive, Richmond is very picturesque.
>
> New York abounds in riches, Chicago in enterprise, New Orleans in wickedness, St. Louis is fervid, Philadelphia nobly built; but Baltimore has a charm beyond nearly all cities in America, which many a visitor has felt without being able to describe. The streets are very sunny, the citizens very gay. But these things may be seen elsewhere, in places of which you do not feel the instant charm. Perhaps the secret lies in a certain combination of brightness and thoughtlessness in the city and the people, which is rather Sicilian than American. New York and New Orleans are far more dissipated cities than Baltimore; yet for a kind of decorous excess in the ways of vice—for dancing and dicing, for driving and drinking, for all the delights which are supposed to hang about wine, woman and song this city on the Chesapeake bears away the bell.

A Pair of Portraits.

William H. Seward sat on the floor of the Senate on Friday. His small figure and slim head, the latter covered with smooth gray and white hair, attracted all attention. Simon Cameron graciously gave him a chair, and Mr. Bingham addressed him with the words of welcome and assurance as to his health. Then Thaddeus Stevens engaged in conversation with Mr. Seward. Two physiques ripe for death were they, but Seward looked the older, having not the advantage of a dark wig, like Mr. Stevens. The latter is a grand looking old man always, but on this occasion his firm mouth, strong brows, and habitual firmness of cynicism, gave him great advantage over Seward's irregular and weak face, which showed many facile lines, as of ready wit, but not of deep principles. Seward has always seemed to me to be a literary man, intrusted with statesmanship. His weaknesses are all those of a professional writer. He is fond of talk, of sentimentalizing, of good wine, and frequent rich food, of riding, flattery and company, and he always has his leading speeches and State papers written out, manifolded, and forwarded to the press in abundant time to print them without error or abridgment. It was in this way that he lost position in politics, loving the dream of empire more than the abstract truths of freedom, and too indolent at his age (nearly seventy) to join an aggressive party again.—G. A. T. Cleveland Leader.

IOWA, though not yet a quarter of a century old, has a population of over one million, and, though not rich, claims to have devised and constructed the most commodious and eligible Hospital for the Insane of any State in the Union. It is located at Mount Pleasant, Henry county. Its central structure, ninety by sixty feet, is four stories high; the six wings (forming a quadrangle) are three stories; it is built of cut stone lined with brick, has an iron roof, and eleven miles of iron pipes for water, gas and heating. It has 425 rooms above the basement. It has cost $600,000, including an Artesian well 2,100 feet deep, which is no longer used, because of the corrosive properties of the water. Dr. R. J. Patterson is the superintendent.

SUNDRY representatives of the manufacturing interests of the country, in anticipation of the speedy resumption of legislative business in Congress, are in Washington to secure modifications of the Amendatory tax bill passed last month. They are greatly dissatisfied with the two-and-a-half per cent. tax on sales, and say the cost of collecting it will be so great that the provision will yield little, if any, revenue. They, therefore, will ask the repeal of that section of the bill, and if the necessities of the country are so great that the manufacturing interests can not be entirely released from taxation, they will suggest a special or license tax that can be paid without subjecting persons to so much inquisitorial examination.

A CURIOUS SIGHT.—Captain Trowell, of the Milwaukee, tells us of a curious sight he witnessed on Lake Michigan on Sunday night. He left this port and getting out into the lake he found it as calm and still as the river, without a ripple to break its surface. The lake was frozen over its entire width by a coating of clear blue ice about as thick as glass, and so calm was it, there was not sea enough to break this coating. He saw the Ministree about three miles off, and the reflection of her lights upon the ice was one of the finest sights ever witnessed. The ice was made on Sunday evening and night, but soon disappeared. Such a sight is witnessed only once in a life time.—Milwaukee paper.

A New Process of Embalming.

Over two hundred members of the medical faculty assembled the other day in the anatomical museum attached to Bellevue Hospital, New York, to be present at an autopsy of the body of a female, aged about thirty, dead seventy-six days, which had been preserved in life-like freshness by a new process of embalming called "nekrosoziac." Professor Doremus presided over the autopsy, in which several of the most distinguished physicians and surgeons of the city participated. This new process of embalming consists simply in a wash of the deceased body without wound or incision. Some of its specialities are to dispense with the old system of disemboweling and extracting the brain; also avoiding mutilation or injection of any kind, and acting as a thorough disinfectant. The body operated upon this day was not in the slightest degree discolored; the features were as regular as in life, and the smell as inoffensive as of a body twenty-four hours after death. The opening of the body revealed the fact that the bowels and brains, as well as the flesh, were free of the slightest appearance of taint or of smell. The limbs were as pliable as in life. Several of the surgeons spoke in high terms of the extraordinary discovery as likely to work a revolution in the preservation and transportation of dead bodies. Another body preserved by the same process for one hundred and three days has been subjected to an equally satisfactory examination.

A Mixed Family.

A gentleman well known to one of our friends relates the following curious family experience:

> I got acquainted with a young widow who lived with her step-daughter in the same house; I married the widow; my father married the step-daughter of my wife; my wife became the mother-in-law and also the daughter-in-law of my own father; my wife's step-daughter is my step-mother, and I am the step-father of my mother-in-law; my step-mother, who is the step-daughter of my wife, has a boy; he is naturally my step-brother, but because he is the son of my wife's step-daughter, so is my wife the grandmother of the little boy, and I am the grandfather of my step-brother; my wife has also a boy; my step-mother is, consequently, the step-sister of my boy, and is also his grandmother, because he is the child of her step-son, and my father is the brother-in-law of my son, because he has got his step-sister for a wife; I am the brother of my own son, who is the son of my step-mother; I am the brother-in-law of my mother; my wife is the aunt of her own son; my son is the grandson of my father, and I am my own grandfather."

A Paradise.

A writer in Putnam's Monthly Magazine thus sums up the happy lot of the Japanese:

> "Take the Japanese as a whole, high and low, rich and poor, they are the best fed, best clad, best lodged, least overworked and most genial and happy people on the face of the earth.
>
> "Food is abundant and cheap—imaginary wants rare; and thus temptations to crime are less than with us, though the land is no Utopia.
>
> "There is no such thing as squalor to be seen in Japan. In the house of the very poorest, a Fifth avenue belle might sit upon the matted floor without soiling her dress. The streets are admirably sewered; all offal and garbage are removed for manure.
>
> "There is no bigotry. The people are wonderfully open-minded. There is no hatred of Christianity as such; only it is feared as an engine to cause political change."

FALLACIES OF THE FACULTY.

The stomach is the ruling organ of the system. If the digestion is imperfect, every member, every gland, every muscle, every nerve and fibre is more or less out of order. All the fluids are depraved. The brain is clouded. The spirits are depressed. All dyspeptics know this to be the truth. It is not, however, half the truth. Columns would be required to enumerate the pains and penalties of dyspepsia, nor could any pen do them justice. Tens of thousands feel them; no man can describe them.

Can they be prevented? Can they be relieved? Can they be banished at once and forever? Unquestionably they can. No dyspeptic has ever taken HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS in vain. Believe no one who says the complaint is incurable. This great vegetable stomachic will eradicate it—is eradicating it in thousands of cases over which medical practitioners have shaken their heads ominously, saying, "Nothing can be done."

The faculty has its fallacies. One of them is that indigestion is the most difficult of all the ordinary ailments of mankind to combat and subdue. This is a mistake. Nothing can be easier than to conquer it if the true specific be administered. This vegetable combination which has become famous throughout the civilized world as HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS is an antidote to the disease which has never been known to fail, and fortunately it is everywhere procurable. If you wish to fool with the dyspepsia, try the pharmacopoeia prescriptions. If you want to root it out and prevent its occurrence take the Bitters daily. There is no discount on the testimony in its favor. If there is a man or woman who has ever tried it for indigestion without being benefitted, the fact has not transpired. Universal, uncontradicted praise avouches its wonderful tonic virtues.

ANOTHER CURE OF DEAFNESS.

I lost my hearing during the last year. Part of the time I was totally deaf. In April of this year I was induced, from an advertisement, to make application to DR. KEYSER, 120 Penn street, Pittsburgh. After having tried various medicines from doctors, without any benefit, I have been under Dr. Keyser's treatment now for nearly two months, and am entirely restored to my hearing, so that I can hear a pin drop. ANOTHER CURE.

A man called to-day at Dr. Keyser's office to inform him of a great cure made by his LUNG CURE, or PULMONARY RESTORATIVE. Whilst these cures are made with the Doctor's preparations, he desires it to be distinctly understood that most of his great cures are made in accordance with the established laws that govern the science of medicine, in which he has been engaged for the past twenty-five years. Last week he was also in receipt of a letter from a clergyman in the State of Ohio, detailing another most wonderful cure.

OFFICE OF THE PITTSBURGH GAZETTE,
WEDNESDAY, April 29, 1868.

The gold market opened strong at 139½, but on large offers to sell, declined to 139⅛ to 139, and dull. There is little disposition among brokers or importers to buy gold at present prices, although it is admitted that the market will not have the full benefit of the large payments of coupons in May. A decline is inevitable from the unwillingness for purchasers to buy now. The advance in the French rentis from 64 to 69, and of Consols from 92¼ to 93¾ and 93⅞, will stimulate investments in American securities, and will thus be adverse to any large shipments of specie.

Government securities are on a standstill. Money has not become so plentiful yet that people will rush and invest at present high prices; the only purchasers in the market are speculators, who may advance the prices on themselves, but will not be able to get the public to buy at their own prices. Bonds are, like any other article of commerce, subject to the same laws that govern advance and decline; the advance was too sudden during the last few days, and people pause and hesitate to buy ot such high prices when it will take a whole years' interest to pay for the additional premium.

Stocks are lower and parties who have bought during the last weeks decline are realizing now and await a further turn in the market. There is an improved demand on local securities, simply to realize the dividends due during the early part of May. A large number of small mortgages are now offered for sale at rates that must be ruinous to the seller, but properties that have been bought when prices were still higher than they now are, cannot be sacrificed without a strong effort to raise even usurious interest.

Closing quotations as received by Ph. R. Mertz, were as follows:

Gold, 139¼; 1881 bonds, 113⅛; 1862 5-20s, 112; 1864 do, 110⅝; 1865 do, 110¾; Consols, 108⅝; 10-40s, 102⅝; 7-30s, 107¼.

PITTSBURGH PETROLEUM MARKET.

OFIFCE OF THE PITTSBURGH GAZETTE,
WEDNESDAY, April 29, 1868.

CRUDE—The market for crude oil has been rather active to-day, but prices are weak at the quotations. This fact is probably occasioned by the prospect of a rise in the Allegheny. We can report the following sales: 1000 bbls spot at 10c; 800 do at 10c; 950 do at 10c; 2000 for May, seller's option, at 10c; 2000 for June, seller's option, at 10c; 6500 bbls first water, at 10c. Contract sales were of 3000 bbls, buyer's option till October 1st, at $4 per bbl, in tanks at Oil City, purchaser paying $1 per bbl in advance. In the absence of transactions, we quote all the year, buyer's option, at 12½ cents.

REFINED—The refined market rules firm and prices have advanced. We are cognizant of the following transactions: A "line" of 6000 bbls, from August to November, inclusive, 1500 bbls each month, at 30c; a "line" of 3000 bbls from July to December, inclusive, 500 each month at 29½c; 500 for May, at 27¼c; 500 for June, at 27½c; 1000 for June, at 28c; 1000 for July, at 28c; 1000 last June, buyer's option, at 28c; 500 last half July, buyer's option, at 28c; 500 all the year, at 32c.

New York Dry Goods Market.

[By Telegraph to the Pittsburgh Gazette.]

NEW YORK, April 29.—The Dry Goods trade is still languid. Domestic staple cottons, however, are firm, being influenced by the extreme prices prevalent for raw material. Still there is but little disposition to buy goods of any class not absolutely required for pressing wants. A better inquiry is anticipated, however, as soon as the weather becomes more settled, and all fabrics, both of cotton and woolen manufacture, are held with much confidence. Fancy thin fabrics, particularly of European make, are in the meantime greatly depressed, and are being forced to sale at a great loss in many instances. Heavy Brown Sheetings steady, at 18½ for Pacific extra, and 19 for Appleton and Indian Head; 9¾a10 for printing cloths, the latter an extreme; 14a15 for Amoskeag, Richmond and Spragues; 18 for Pacific laws; 18 for American printed delaines; 18 for Lancaster ginghams; 40 for Lewiston cottonades; 42½ for farmers and mechanics double.

PITTSBURGH MARKETS.

OFFICE OF THE PITTSBURGH GAZETTE,
WEDNESDAY, April 28, 1868.

Trade continues active and improving in the aggregate of transactions, but since our last, prices of the leading staples are without material change. The weather for a considerable portion of the day interfered with out-door transactions. Flour continues very active, and under lighter receipts and advices from the West of higher rates, together with the active inquiry, and small stocks in store, holders are asking stiffer rates for choice brands, and are anticipating another advance. The demand for Bacon and Lard is very active, and prices are still tending up. Groceries are in fair demand, and Coffees are advancing. The following are the ruling wholesale quotations:

GROCERIES—During the past week there has been an active inquiry for Groceries. With the advance in gold Coffees are advancing. Refined Sugars are ¼ cent higher, and firm at quotations given below. Syrups are advanced from 5c to 10c per gallon. White Fish and Lake Herring have advanced 50c per half barrel, and continues very firm at quotations.

SUGARS—New Orleans, 14½c to 16c; Cuba, 12½ to 13c; Porto Rico, 13c to 14c; Crushed, 18c; "A" Coffee, 17c; "B" do, 16½c; Extra "C," 16¼c.

COFFEE—Prime Rio, 26½ to 27c; good, 24c; fair, 22c; Old Government Java, 37½ to 38c; Laguayra, 28c.

MOLASSES—New Orleans, 90 to $1; Cuba, 65 to 70c; Porto Rico, 70 to 75c.

SYRUPS—"Lovering's," $1; "Booth & Edgar," 85c; "Amber, 75c; "Drips," $1.05 to $1,10.

SPICES—Cassia, 80 to 85c; Cloves, 50c; Pepper, 38c; Allspice, 35c; Nutmegs, $1,50.

RICE—Rangoon, 11½c; Carolina, 12½c.

STARCH—Madison, 8c; Silver Gloss, 12½c, and Corn Starch, 13½c.

FRUITS—Layer Rasins, $4,75 per box; Valentia, 20c per lb; Prunes, 17c; Currants, 14c for new.

BAR LEAD—12c; Shot, $3,50 per bag.

SOAPS—"Babbitt's," 12c; "Oakley's," 11½c; Rosin, 4½ to 6c; "Dobbin's," 15c.

CANDLES—Mould, 16c; Star, 23c.

CONCENTRATED LYE—$7,50 per case.

BI CARB SODA—$8,50 per 100.

FISH—White Fish, $8,00; Lake Herring, $4; Mackerel No. 1, $22; No. 2, $18,00; No. 3, $14,50; in half bbls, 50c more.

TOBACCO—Black 5s, 10s, ¼s and Louisville Navy, 72 to 75c; Wm. H. Grant's 10s and Navy, 80c; C. & D. Tobacco, 22c to 25c for best.

TEA—The market is firm and prices are higher for new crop. Choice Young Hyson, $1,75; fair, $1,50; common to good, $1 to $1,35; Oolong, 75c, 85c, 90c, $1, $1,25 and $1,35; good Porto Rico, $1 to $1,85, as to quality. Imperial, $1 to $1,85. Japan—Choice, $1,30; fair $1.

FLOUR—The market was excited and sales were very large. For the past few days, with the exception of yesterday, the receipts have been heavy, but the demand was sufficient, with the orders on hand, sold ahead to carry off the surplus recepts and leave a bare market. We see by private dispatches from Chicago this afternoon that choice brands of Spring were fully 25c higher, owing to a better feeling in Wheat. The demand here is much greater than our dealers expected. The advance at Chicago to-day has not changed the price in this market as yet, but holders are more firmer. We quote the prices of the following brands: Dayton Snow Flake (White Winter) $13; White River (Red Winter) $12; Jenking Mills, $12; Crossetts, $11,75; Emerald, $11,50; Medium brands, $10,50 to $11; Rye Flour, $9,50 per barrel.

GRAIN—The receipts are very light, but prices have not undergone any material change. Shelled Corn is scarce and commands $1,05 to $1,10 from elevator. Oats from first hands brings 77 to 79c, and from store 80 to 83c. On track Rye sold at $1,85 to $1,30, with a good demand and light import. Barley is scarce and nominal at $2,50. There is no Wheat coming in except that bought by millers in the West; quoted nominally at $2,40 to $2,45 for No 1 Spring; Red Winter, $2,65 to $2,70; and White Wheat, $2,70 to $2,75.

BEANS...None in market, and White small would readily bring $5 per bushel.

BUTTER—Prices are drooping. To-day prime to choice Roll was rather dull at 40 to 45c.

EGGS—Market firm at 23c.

PROVISIONS—The market is active at the following prices. We now quote Mess Pork at $28,50 per bbl; Sugar Cured Hams, 19¾ to 20c; do Canvassed, 20¾ to 21c; Shoulders, 14¼ to 14½c; Ribbed Sides, 16½c; Clear Sides, 18½c; choice Dried Beef, 23 to 24c, and Lard, 19c per ponnd.

LARD OIL—There is a large demand for Extra No. 1 at $1,48 to $1,50, and $1,20 per gallon for No. 2.

SALT—Small jobbing lots at $2,00 per barrel.

POTATOES—Sales of Peach Blows by the car load at $1,40 per bushel, and Buckeyes from store at $4,25 to $4,50 per bbl.

CRANBERRIES—Sales of choice Cultivated at $18 per barrel.

HAY—Baled Hay on the wharf commands $24 to $26 per ton, and loose Timothy from country wagons at $24 to $28 per ton, as to quality.

PROPOSING BY LETTER.

BY SHIRLEY BROWNE.

Eleven o'clock—at least so said the golden tide of sunshine, creeping over the velvety turf of the village green, and losing itself in the murmurous foliage of the big maple trees; and so said the little clock in Judge Cornell's law office on the Main street, speaking in a sharp, melodious chime.

Harry Grover glanced quietly up at the uncompromising little dial, as he entered the domain of "Coke upon Littleton."

"I'm late this morning," he muttered, hanging up his hat behind the door; "but, as good luck will have it, the Judge has not made his appearance yet!"

He was a straight, handsome young fellow, with curly brown hair, limped hazel eyes, and a healthy flush on his sunbrowned cheeks—a young man whom you instinctively felt you could trust, a l' entrance, as you looked into his frank, honest face. There was not many such; more's the pity!

"Whew—whew—whew!" whistled Mr. Harry Grover, turning over his pile of legal documents in a very immethodical sort of way. "Law and love were never meant to go together; of that I am certain. Pretty Ariel Browne's blue eyes are shining roguishly out at me from every bit of parchment or printed blank I touch. How lovely she looked last night—and who would ever suppose that the old cat with the false curls and grinning porcelain teeth, could be her aunt? Rich, too, they say; a good match for some desperate fortune hunter, who is willing to swallow the bitter old pill for the sake of the gold coating. Let me see—talking about old Experience Browne, I believe I have a business letter to write to her about that piece of land by the schoolhouse corners that she wants me to buy. Not I! When I purchase land for a building spot, it won't be a desolate pasture, where rocks and mullen stocks fight together to see which shall possess the staunch soil. The old lady must take me for a very unsophisticated character indeed. I wonder, now, if blue-eyed Ariel will ever be a wrinkled catamaran clutching after bargains. Pooh! I should as soon think of a white plumed little dove being transformed into a greedy vulture?"

He leaned back in his chair, with both hands clasped on top of his curly head, and looked out abstractedly into the slushing village street, humming an old tune under his breath—a tune whose burden was "love, still love."

Plainly, Mr. Harry Grover was very little disposed for work that morning. And when, at twelve o'clock, Judge Cornell came in, there was but a hopeless chaos of papers on the table to represent his young partner's matutinal labors.

"Why, Grover, you haven't accomplished a thing this morning," said the old Judge, glancing keenly around through his antique silver bound spectacles. "I am afraid that the pretty girls at 'Squire Dockthorn's party last night were too much for your mental equilibrium."

"Well, you see, sir, I've been rather sorting the papers over," said Harry, a little sheepishly, "and I've written two letters this morning!"

"Two letters?"

"Yes, sir."

"May I ask to whom?"

"One was to old Miss Experience Browne, about that lot she wanted to sell me—a regular clipper, giving the old hag a piece of my mind—and the other———"

"The other——"

"Ahem—that wasn't exactly a business letter. Now, Judge, suppose you and I look over the papers together!"

The Judge smiled slyly; he had an idea as to what the other letter contained! Every one in town knew how hopelessly Mr. Harry Grover was in love with pretty Ariel Browne! Judge Cornell had been young himself not so very many years ago!

"It's just as well for the lad to marry and settle down," thought the old gentlemen, "and Ariel will certainly make as sweet a little wife as human moral could wish for!"

Harry needn't have been so mysterious, sealing and directing his two letters at the tall desk behind the office door.

Judge Cornell knew just as well what was in them as if he had read every word with his own eyes. But young people have a mistaken idea that old people don't know anything!

Miss Ariel Browne sat in her room, busy with a complicated piece of bright-colored web-work that ladies call "crochet," when Bridget tapped softly at the panels of the door.

"Please, Miss Ariel, a letter!"

"A letter! and for me! Dear me, Bridget, and who can it be from?"

"Faix, then, and its meself doesn't know, but Lawyer Grover's office boy brought it, and an impudent young spalpeen he is, for——"

But here Bridget became conscious that her young mistress was paying no attention to her, and withdrew into her department of the kitchen, there to nurse her griefs in solitude.

Ariel's cheek had turned as pink as the inside of a wild rose-bud, as she read the superscription of the letter, and her heart beat, perhaps a pulse or two faster than was its wont, but she broke open the missive with a resolute hand and read:

"MY DEAR MISS BROWNE: ["Rather cold beginning!" she pouted.] I must beg to decline all further negotiations with you. As you cannot for a moment suppose I care to possess anything so utterly worn down and good for nothing, it is useless to waste either of our time in any more preliminaries.

"I will call this afternoon and return to you the papers you so unnecessarily took the trouble to send me.

"Yours, very truly, H. GROVER.

Ariel threw down the note and burst into tears.

"The cold-hearted, presumptuous villain!" she sobbed. "Papers, indeed! I suppose he means the note I wrote him about the pic-nic. Oh, how foolish I have been, how absurd, and I am rightfully punished for my folly!"

But still Ariel wept on; when a girl of eighteen has built up a glittering castle in the air, whose foundations are laid in her own heart, she cannot see it dashed ruthlessly into ruins without a few natural tears!"

Meanwhile, Miss Experience Browne, atat fifty well ripened autumns, was reading with no little astonishment, the letter which Bridget's enemy, the post-boy, had brought for her.

"U-pon my word!" exclaimed Miss Experience, slowly and emphatically. "The impertinent young fortune-hunting humbug! Does he suppose I'm a born fool, to swallow such a pack of sentimental flattery as this? 'Lovely eyes—dimples!' If he'd have said spectacles, he'd have been considerably nearer right. No you don't, my fine fellow—no—you—don't! Experience Browne hasn't lived fifty-five years in the world to fall into such a trap as this at last. 'He'll call this afternoon to receive the answer that is to decide the whole current of his future life,' will he? Well, let him call. I'll be ready for him, and I warrant me he won't be in a hurry to call again."

And Miss Experience chuckled to herself until all the false curls quivered, as she folded the letter neatly, and put it back into its hurriedly directed envelope.

"I never had an offer of marriage before," she thought, viewing her autmnal countenance in a pier-glass, and adjusting the little puffs of ribbon in her cap border, "and it does make one feel kind of queer! It's something to tell of anyway. Bethuar Jones needn't go to saying now that I was an old maid, because I had never had an offer! I just wonder what Ariel would say—I guess I won't tell her; she would only laugh at me!"

Miss Experience drew herself up as grimly as if her spinal column were a bar of iron, that afternoon; when Bridget announced:

"Mr. Grover, mem!"

"Show him in, Biddy—I am quite at leisure to receive him."

And our hero, entirely innocent of the impending storm that awaited him, walked into Miss Experience's awful presence, with a bundle of title deeds in his hand, tied with the official looking red tape of his profession.

"Good afternoon, Miss Experience!"

"Aint' you ashamed of yourself, Harry Grover?" ejaculated the spinster, in a deep, stern voice. "Get along with yourself, makin' love to an old woman mor'n twice as old as you be, just because she's got a little money! What do you take me for, hey? Don't stand starin there! Walk out of this room, quick, or I'll throw the big dictionary at your head! No, NO, no! Now have you got your answer plain enough? I wouldn't marry you if there wasn't another man in the whole town!"

Harry Grover was a little appalled at this charge of horse and foot, but he stood his ground manfully, not even quailing at the big dictionary!

"But, Miss Browne—will you hear me a moment? I don't want you to marry me! What has put this strange fancy in your head?"

"You don't want to marry me? Then what the mischief does this letter mean, I'd like to know."

"May I look at it?"

Harry took the letter, and glanced at it—its contents threw a new light upon the unaccountable state of affairs.

"Good Cupid! what a blockhead—what unmitigated, inexcusable, incomparable donkey I have been! What could I have been thinking about?"

"Hey?" demanded the puzzled spinster.

"Excuse me, ma'am, but there has been a mistake—a——"

And without stopping to complete his fragmentary sentence, he rushed out of the room to the little bay-windowed parlor, where Ariel usually sat.

"Well, I never!" exclaimed Miss Experience, as the door banged unceremoniously in her face.

"Ariel! Miss Browne!"

But Ariel turned haughtily from the pleading eyes of her lover.

"Your letter is quite sufficient, sir; I need no further exponent of your meaning."

"Ariel—darling—there has been an absurd mistake; this is the letter that was intended for you. The other was written to your aunt on business, and by some unaccountable blunder, got into the wrong envelope! I have been a fool—a blockhead, but I love you, dearest, with all my heart! Ariel! you will not send me away!"

No—Ariel did not send him away, for the shy smiles and the rosy bloom were beginning to come back to her face as she read the real letter!

"But Harry!" she said, with a roguish dimple at the corner of her mouth, "you must confess that aunt Experience's note had rather an unpleasant style."

"I was a careless reprobate," said Harry, frankly, "but you see Judge Connell was watching me, and—"

And that was the end of all misunderstanding between Harry Grover and Ariel Browne, thenceforth, forevermore.

Miss Experience was rather disapppinted in two things. She would like to have sold the school house "corner lot," and she would like to have said that once, in the course of her fifty-five years of life, she had had an offer of marriage.

"However," said Miss Experience, "Ariel is very happy, and may be things are best as they are?"

For SMOKE AND HOT AIR FLUES, dispensing with the use of Stoves and Fires in or about the Passenger or Baggage Cars, with the attachment to graduate the heat to any temperature that may be desired without the possibility of firing the car or cars to which the Jacket may be attached.

Having obtained of the United States Letters Patent for a Safety Jacket which is warranted to resist the most intense heat that may be adplied to it in the position and purpose for which it is intended. It is a sure protection from accidents by fire, originating from defective flues, or where iron pipes are used as conductors for smoke or heat. It is applicable to all piping that may become overheated, and is warranted to give perfect satisfaction where wood or other combustible material may be placed in close proximity thereto. CITY AND SUBURBAN.

The Highway Robbery Case--Second "Trial"--One of the Accused Discharged--The Prosecutor Committed for Perjury.

We published a few days since an account of the alleged robbery of Labius B. Kelly, shoemaker, of Turtle Creek, by Thomas Devine, Ed. McGann and James Brightmore, hack-drivers, at a house of ill-fame on Miltenberger's alley, in this city, and also a report of the hearing before Alderman Owston, deputy Mayor, who discharged the accused. A second information having been made before Alderman Strain, another hearing or trial of the case took place yesterday. At the hour appointed the parties appeared, the "trial" proceeded, and the following evidence was adduced:

L. B. Kelly, the prosecutor, testified that he resided at Turtle Creek, and is a shoemaker. He had no acquaintance with the prisoners, except to know them by sight. On Thursday last he came to town, arriving here about ten o'clock P. M. He went to the Rush House, but could not get lodging. He started away, and McGann took him down Penn street to Canal. There the other two defendants and a German were sitting in a wagon. McGann told him to get into the wagon, and he would take him to a place where he could get lodging and breakfast. He got in, and they put the German out at the corner, and took the witness to a house of ill fame. There Devine demanded five dollars. The witness refused, and said he had not so much. Devine then left. McGann came up, and said he was going to have that money. The witness offered three dollars, and took out his pocket book, containing sixty dollars. McGann snatched all the money except forty-five cents from the pocket book, and then left immediately. Devine had been standing by and left also. Devine had driven the wagon. Brightmore had remained in the wagon, but had come to the door and told the others to come away and let the man alone. When witness went out, the men and wagon were gone. The affair occurred at between eleven and half past. On cross-examination the witness stated he came here in the morning, and went to Wilkinsburg to collect a bill. He returned here in the evening and took four drinks. He did not know where the house was that the men drove him to, and they did not stop at any other place. He did not tell officer Grover that he had paid those men three dollars, and that was all the money except a few cents. He denied, also, that he said at the Mayor's office that he had been robbed of only forty-five dollars. He stated that he lost two $20 bills in National currency, a $10 greenback, a five dollar bill, two one dollar bills and three dollars in scrip. He was certain he had the money when he entered the house. When McGann took the money he said nothing, for he thought it would be useless. He remained about fifteen minutes at the house after the men left, but said nothing to the persons there about the robbery. He got one twenty dollar bill from a railroad man at Turtle Creek. He saw an acquaintance at the Rush House after he returned, and told him of the robbery. He denied having said that he had paid to the driver all the money he had. There were two women in the room when he was robbed. There was no light in the room except from the fire in the grate.

N. M. Robling, an employé of the St. James Hotel, testified that on the night of the robbery he heard a noise outside, and on going out saw a German in a wagon with Devine. He asked Devine where he was going with the man, but received no answer. Followed the wagon to Canal street, and then saw Brightmore with Kelly approaching the wagon. The German got off the wagon at Penn street, and McGann, Brightmore and Devine got in, and drove down Penn street. Kelly did not seem to be drunk. Saw him afterwards at the Rush House and he seemed to have been drinking. He said he had been robbed, and witness counselled him to keep quiet, as he knew the parties he had been with. On cross-examination, witness stated that he thought McGann was in the wagon when Kelly and Brightmore got in.

Joseph Kolback, a resident of Allegheny, testified that he was in the wagon on the night mentioned, and Kelly got in when he got out. McGann and Devine were in the wagon. He thought Kelly and the others a little drunk.

This closed the testimony for the prosecution.

For the defense officer Roger O'Mara testified that on the night in question he saw Kelly at the Rush House, and heard him say that he had been overcharged by the defendants, but heard nothing whatever of having been robbed. There were several parties talking to him, and witness said but little to him. Witness did not know whether Kelly knew that he was an officer or not. Brightmore was in the crowd, but whether Kelly saw him or not witness could not say.

Officer Daniel Grover testified that he is an officer stationed at the Rush House; heard defendant complaining of being overcharged; asked him what was the matter, and was told that the three men had charged him three dollars, which was all the money he had, except eighteen cents. Did not get the impression that he had been robbed. Did not hear Kelly tell Mr. Robling he had been robbed.

Lieutenant Seth Wilmot testified that on the morning of the 24th he saw Kelly at the Mayor's office. He said he had been robbed of $45. Then he said he had been robbed of $55. Finally he said $65 had been stolen from him. Witness thought Kelly was intoxicated.

James Archibald testified that he saw Kelly in the Rush House, on the morning in question, and he complained of extortion by the defendants.

Mrs. Fanny Splane testified that Kelly was brought to her house on the night mentioned, and McGann and Devine were with him, all being under the influence of liquor. Witness saw Kelly pay some money to McGann, but did not know how much. After the men had gone, Kelly said he was afraid to go out, and staid a little while; said he had no money, but a check for $150 or $200. Did not say anything about being robbed. Had been sitting in such a position that she could see what took place between Kelly and McGann.

Mary Kauffman was sworn and corroborated the testimony of Mrs. Splane.

Jas. Martin testified in effect as officers O'Mara and Grover had done.

No further testimony was adduced.

At the request of the prosecuting counsel Brightmore was discharged, and Devine and McGann were held for a further hearing on Saturday afternoon at three o'clock.

After the hearing James Brightmore, one of the defendants, made information charging L. B. Kelly with perjury. The case was held over for a hearing.

It will be observed by the evidence of the prosecutor that he not only testifies to the fact that he was robbed, but also identified the man who commiteed the robbery, and his accomplices. His statement corresponds precisely with that made under oath before deputy Mayor Owston. In several important points he is fully corroborated by N. M. Robling, who swears that he saw Kelly get into the wagon with the accused, and that he next saw him at the Rush House, where he heard him say he had been robbed. He is also corroborated in part by the testimony of Joseph Kolback, who swears that he (Kolback) was in the wagon, and saw Kelly get in, after which he got (Kolback) out.

The testimony on the part of the defence is, to make the most of it, merely of a negative character, and of that kind, which, if admitted at all, should be considered by a jury, on the trial of the case. There is, however, not a single fact proven by the defendants which does not in some point, material or immaterial, corroborate the testimony of the prosecutor. The only fact established by the testimony of O'Mara is that Kelly was at the Rush House after the robbery is said to have been committed, and this Kelly himself states. The testimony of Grover and Archibald establishes nothing more. The testimony of officer Wilmot does not establish any fact, as it is merely a statement of a conversation had with the witness. Fanny Splane, occupant of the house where Kelly was taken, corroborates his statement in several important points and does not contradict him in anything material. She says that Kelly came to her house with Devine and McGann, that he was left there by them and remained some time, stating that he was afraid to go out, to all of which Kelly testified.

We have, perhaps, argued the case. But since the Alderman has seen proper to try it, we may be allowed the privilege of going outside of our strict duty and to assume the role of counsel, in justification of remarks heretofore made about the case.

We seriously doubt the propriety of the arrest of Kelly on a charge of perjury before the larceny case has been decided. It is alleged, however, that the case is decided so far as Brightmore, the prosecutor in the perjury case, is concerned, he having been discharged.

The prosecutor is not, in a case of the character in hand, responsible for the names of parties included in an information. He states the facts to the magistrate, who is supposed to have sufficient knowledge of the law to know what names to insert and what charge to make, having the facts. The prosecutor swears to the facts above and nothing more. And in this case, if there is probable grounds for supposing two of the parties guilty, the facts would, it seems to us, justify the including of the third party as an accomplice.

In the Court of Quarter Sessions of Venango county, on Tuesday, the case of C. V. Culver and James S. Austin, indicted for conspiracy to defraud and embezzlement of fifty thousand dollars worth of stock (on special deposit) of the Tradesmen's National Bank of Pittsburgh, on oath of Dr. A. G. Egbert, was called up. There appeared for the prosecution Messrs. S. A. Purviance, F. D. Kinnear and S. Griffith; for the defendants, Messrs. Archibald Blakely, J. D. Hancock, W. L. Corbett and J. K. Kerr.

On motion of defendants' counsel the case was postponed till August term, owing to the non-attendance of an important witness, and to the failure to procure by regular subpœna the books of the Petroleum Bank, in the possession of the receiver of that institution, F. W. Aims, Esq.

We had a reporter on hand to fully report the proceedings, but the continuance disappointed our expectations. The case is a very important one, and when it comes up we promise a faithful report to our readers. The prosecution urgently pressed for trial at the present term, but the defense appeared timid to venture on the evidence they had at hand.

A Grumbler.

Some grumbler, signing himself "Charity," has addressed a note to his Honor, the Mayor, relative to the manner in which the "Managers of the Methodist Graveyard, on Bedford street, are having the remains of those buried there removed and reinterred." He says "the workmen dig a trench, and then collect the bones by the basketful and then throw them into the trench promiscuously. The boxes containing the remains of those recently buried are likewise tumbled into the ditch in the same manner." He further states that the work of removing the bodies should be postponed until cold weather, as the stench already rising from the graveyard is "unbearable." The Mayor would attend to the matter immediately if he thought there was any truth in the statement, but as the writer of the note was ashamed to put his name to it, he is inclined to pay no attention to it. He is right.

Furniture at Auction.

A large and splendid stock of furniture, both new and second-hand, will be disposed of to-day by Messrs. Smithson, Vanhook & McClelland, at the Masonic Hall Auction Rooms, No. 55 and 57 Fifth street. The stock embraces bureaus, wardrobes, washstands, tables, bedsteads of every description, and in fact almost every article of furniture requisite. The sale of furniture commences at ten o'clock and continues till eleven, at which time a large and complete stock of groceries will be sold. At two o'clock a large lot of elegant carpets will be sold without reserve, after which three good pianos will be disposed of. Persons desiring a good investment at low price, will do well to attend this sale.

Pocket Picked.—Mr. David Keesports, of Logansport, Indiana, had his pocket picked at Union Depot, yesterday, between two and three o'clock, of a pocket book containing fifty dollars in greenbacks and a draft on an Eastern bank for three hundred dollars. Mr. K. had been to Lancaster, Pa., and was on his way home when he was robbed. He thinks it was done while getting aboard the train for the West.

Assault and Battery.—Catharine Gilchrist made information, before Justice Ammon, charging James Harvey with assault and battery. She alleges that the accused beat and abused her child. The parties reside at the American Iron Works. A warrant was issued for his arrest.

Surety of the Peace.—Eliza Bradley, of Hatfield, fears that her neighbor Ellen Aiken will do her some bodily harm, and made information before Alderman Irwin, of Lawrenceville, for surety of the peace. A warrant was issued for her arrest.

THE COURTS.

United States District Court—Judge McCandless.

In the bankruptcy branch, Messrs. McElroy, Dickson & Co., of this city, filed a petition against J. D. and J. O. Vogan, doing business as Vogan & Bro., at Anandale, Butler county, asking that they be adjudged bankrupts. The petitioning creditors allege that the Messrs. Vogan are indebted to them in the sum of $304.40, and that, with the intent to delay, hinder and defraud them and other creditors, they have disposed of their store and goods valued at $5,000, to Harlen Rook, Anandale, together with their book accounts, etc. It is also alleged that J. D. Vogan, one of the firm, has left the State, for the purpose of defrauding the creditors of the firm. Other acts of bankruptcy within the meaning of the law are alleged, and the petitioners therefore asked that the debtors be declared bankrupts. A rule was granted on the Messrs. Vogan, directing them to show cause why the prayer should not be granted. The rule was made returnable on the 9th day of May.

Final discharges were granted and certificates awarded to Orman Osborn, of Warren county, Charles R. Brown, of Erie county, Hugh A. Jones, Allegheny county, Jay F. Kusball, Erie county, William B. Midaugh, Tioga county, William H. Baker and Lewis W. Jones, of Waynesburg, Greene county.

Petitions for final discharge were filed by Amos Joliff, of Uniontown, John P. Cooper, Luzerne county, and W. H. Vahn, of Susquehanna county.

Petitions for adjudication were filed by Jacob Dundore, of Union county, and Nathan O. Hinchman, of Westmoreland county.

In the case of L. D. Taylor & Co., bankrupts, a special order was made by the Court, on petition being presented, directing the assignee to sell either at public or private sale the whole or any part of the outstanding debts due the bankrupts, after advertising the same in a Tioga county newspaper, and by hand bills posted in Blossburg, same county.

In the case of Ellis Morris, on motion of G. S. Berry, Esq., counsel for creditors, special commissioners were appointed in New York, Philadelphia and Boston, to take testimony.

Court of Common Pleas—Judge Sterrett.

In the case of Charles vs. Humphreys, the jury found for the plaintiff in the sum of $261 02.

Fort Pitt Coal Company vs. Shaffer & Obey. Action on book account. Verdict in favor of plaintiff for the sum of $263 20.

Mary Ann Carpenter vs. Jacob Schmidt. Action for slander. Jury out.

Body Found—Coroner's Inquest.

Between seven and eight o'clock yesterday morning, the body of a man was found floating in the Monongahela river, opposite the foot of Penn street, by Mr. William Hoffman, who was crossing the river in a skiff. The body was identified as that of Martin Connor, a laborer, who fell overboard from the steamboat J. N. McCullough, then lying at the Monongahela wharf, immediately below the Suspension bridge, on the 3d inst. The deceased at the time of the accident was sitting on the stern of the boat. He fell between the steamer and the wharf boat, and it is supposed he was immediatety swept under the latter. The body was towed to shore and Coroner Clawson notified, who held an inquest upon it, when the jury returned a verdict of "accidental death by drowning." The deceased was aged about twenty-two years, was unmarried, and boarded at No. 105 Water street. His father resides on the line of the Panhandle Railroad, near Steubenville, and he has been informed by telegraph of the recovery of the body, which will be taken home for interment.

Safe Keeping.

John Grace, a young man recently from New York, made information before Alderman M'Masters, yesterday, charging Mrs. Lee, of Allegheny, with larceny by bailee. He alleges that when he arrived in the city he made the acquaintance of the accused and boarded with her for some time. He, by her advice, went to Seymour & Bros. to learn house painting, and as his work was on this side of the river, he concluded to change his boarding house. He paid his board, and got everything belonging to him about the house except a gold ring, valued at six dollars, formerly the property of his mother, which Mrs. Lee had taken charge of for "safe keeping." He asked for the ring, but she declined to give it up, hence the information. A warrant was issued.

The Haymakers in Costume.

The beautiful cantata of the "Haymakers," which was produced at the Academy of Music some time since, and which was so highly applauded by all who had the good fortune to be present, will be reproduced Saturday afternoon at the same place and by the same artists. It will doubtless be well attended, as the high musical reputation of those having it in charge is sufficient to recommend the entertainment to all. We know that it was a complete success before, and have no hesitancy in predicting a still greater success for it this time.

Sharp Practice.

David Bovail a Section Boss for the Pittsburgh & Connellsville Railway company, made information before the Mayor yesterday, charging David Mullaney with obtaining money under false pretense. It appears that the accused was working on the road under the prosecutor, and that he yesterday went to the Treasurer's office and drew his money, $25, after which he prepared an order on the boss for the same amount, which was cashed when presented. A warrant was issued, but the "sharper" had left the city on the train befofe the officer reached the depot.

Determined Lover.—George A. Harvey made information before Alderman Taylor, yesterday, against Daniel Haney and Michael Brennon for surety of the peace. Harvey, it appears, eloped with Haney's sister, for whom it is stated Brennon has a "weakness." The "big brother" and the disappointed lover, hearing of the elopement, started in pursuit and succeeded in overtaking the fleeing pair, when it is alleged they threatened to do bodily harm to the deponent. They were arrested and held for a hearing.

A Modern Don Juan.—Catharine Wentling, a young widow, made information before Ald. McMasters, Tuesday, charging Stephen Belinge with fornix et cet. He was arrested and after a hearing committed to jail, but having procured the required bail was released vesterday evening. It transpired during the hearing that there are five others, victims to his seductive arts, who will prosecute. He was about to leave the city, when the widow, hearing of his intention, caused him to delay his departure for a few days.

A Wife Beater.—William Shields, a resident of "Barefoot Square," First ward, Allegheny, was arrested yesterday by officer Stewart for beating and abusing his wife and family. He was taken to the lock-up, and an information for assault and battery will be made against him this morning.

Beat a Child.—William Downey was charged on oath of Nicholas Bishop of Pitt township with assault and battery. It is alleged that the accused beat and abused a child of the prosecutor. Alderman Irwin, before whom the information was made, issued a warrant for the arrest of Downey.

The Soldiers' Monument.

The disapproval of the action of the Executive Committee of the Allegheny County Soldiers' Monumental Association, in selecting a lot in the Cemetery on which to erect the monument, has been so generally expressed that it is hardly probable they will now insist upon placing it there. It is not fair to presume that a Committee of ladies and gentlemen composed of such high toned moral persons as constitute this Executive Committee will allow either a feeling of petty sectional jealousy or self-interest to have so strong an influence on their actions as to lead them to do that which has been so generally objected to and condemned by the public. We are not disposed to believe them so headstrong and self-willed as to act not only independent of public opinion, but in direct opposition to an almost universal expression of it. We have not heard a single person outside of the Commitiee express an opinion favorable to the erection of the monument in the Cemetery, and we think there is not a man or woman in the county, not interested in the Cemetery either directly or indirectly, who would express such an opinion. We would regret to have this Committee do that which would detract from the well merited praise received during the progress of the fair, for the energetic and faithful efforts displayed to secure the means with which to erect the monument. We hope they will consider the matter carefully, and at an early day reconsider the action which is so evidently dissatisfactory to the people whose money they are about to expend. A number of sites have been proposed, any one of which is preferable to the one selected, and as we have no feeling in the matter, other than our opposition to the Cemetery, we favor no particular location.

District Attorneyship.

PITTSBURGH, April 29, 1868.

EDITORS GAZETTE—In the selection of a District Attorney, great care should be exercised. The office is one of great public importance, and the man chosen to fill it should not only be learned in the law but should also be affable, attentive to business, and calculated to inspire public confidence. Permit us, therefore, to suggest through your columns the name of Col. Thomas M. Bayne as a candidate for this office. He unites in himself all the qualifications required. He has served his country in the field; he is a lawyer of experience, and all who might have business with him would be treated courteously and their business promptly attended to. With all deference to the claims and qualifications of the candidates already before the public, his friends claim for him that he is in no way inferior to any of them.

Burnett's Florimel closely resembles the odor of a rare and delicate bouquet of flowers, and in this respect stands unrivalled. A few drops will leave its peculiar and delightful fragrance upon the handkerchief for many hours.

BURNETT'S COLOGNE is equal to the best imported. It is put up in a neat and elegant style, and wins for itself a favorite place on the dressing table. Its intrinsic merits really justify the high reputation in which it is held.—Providence Journal.

IT IS ALLOWED to but few men to survive such a mass of obituary comments, and all cast in high phrases of admiration, as Dr. Livingstone has outlived. He will be the real redivivus of our century. The very jaws of the grave could not release one whose returned presence would furnish greater surprise and more general satisfaction. His will have been the only living eyes in the head of a white man that have surveyed the lands and the inhabitants of the heart of unknown Africa. His the only face that has been bronzed by the fierce suns of that vague and vast tropical interior. The Geographical Societies will want almost to devour him, in order to possess themselves bodily of the treasury of his rare knowledge. The ethnologists will feel like pulling him limb from limb. Royalty will make haste to do him honor, whose own highest proof of Royalty is to be found in his intelligent courage and undying fortitude. His return, which may now be looked for in England as not very far off, will create a social and scientific stir to which the Parliamentary debates will be as nothing in comparison. And all this, not simply because an individual has succeeded in safely crossing the wilds of Africa, but because a larger knowledge of that enigmatical continent has stretched and informed the thought of every man who aims seriously to grasp and realize all the possible conditions of the human race.—Boston Post.

Extravagance in Men.

[From the London Review.]

There are lots of young men with whom the spending of money is a positive disease. They constantly demonstrate the truth of the familliar proverb. There is a sort of fatal profusion in their habits. Women are accused very unfairly of being over extravagant. As a rule, men are far more so; and the account against them is principally due to those who fritter everything they gain or sell in numberless and nameless trifles. A woman has a natural title to being well clad—to being, indeed, clad so as to make the most of her appearance. She has a sense for jewelry. To deny her ornaments is to stifle a genuine, and reasonable instinct. But a man who parts with a considerable portion of his income in order to comply with every freak of his tailor, and who really seems to have only used his brains upon the patterns of neckties, is one of the most pitiable creetures alive. A gentleman ought to be correctly and neatly dressed. There is something revolting, as well as startling, in the style in which the unfortunate London cad turns out to air himself on the tops of omnibuses and on the penny steamboats on Sunday. Still, the extremes meet. The cad is not, in all probability, a greater jackass than the person he mimics. He is also extravagant in his own miserable way. He has given more than he can afford for his flaring scarf with its horrible brass pin, his embroidered shirt front, and all the rest of his vile pharaphernalia. Extravagance is not confined to a class. Some working men spend proportionately as much in beer houses and music halls as those above them do in Clubs and at the opera or theatre.

Aerodomes.

This is the name given to a new class of houses to be erected in Paris with the approval of the Emperor. The streets are to be widened, and the houses are to be made very high. They will be not less than ten stories high, access to the upper ones being afforded by lifts. Iron is to constitute the framework of these vast edifices, which are to rise to altitudes of from one hundred to a hundred and twenty feet. At the fifth story there will be a terrace ten feet broad, which forms a sort of base for the "aerodome" above, and the rooms on this terrace can be occupied for stores, as is the story next the ground. The other parts of the aerodomes may communicate with each other by means of bridges thrown across from terrace to terrace, and in this way there would be two towns, one above the other; a large amount of traffic will be carried on without descending into the streets at all, provisions, fuel, &c., being obtained by means of the lifts. Each aerodome may be inhabited by one thousand people and more, all enjoying commodious apartments, a pure atmosphere, and abundance of light, while the streets below will be wide and airy.

WHATEVER may be the result of the Southern elections, the Southern States have for the first time been treated to the novelty of a free, untrammeled political discussion. No restraints have been placed upon the politicians or newspapers so far as the support of their party and candidates have been concerned. They have written and said what seemed best to them from Florida to Arkansas, without fear of Government restraint or popular violence.

Mob law, which, in former years, silenced opposition and controlled elections, has been done away with, and the press and the people now express their opinions with impunity, and free discussion prevails. If the Southern whites are now suffering from wrongs, this very freedom of thought and speech will sooner or later right them, and will at the same time insure protection for the liberated bondmen. Free thought, free speech, and a free press, will always secure individual freedom.

CALIFORNIA is rapidly filling up with immigrants from the Atlantic States. The exceedingly low fares, caused by the competition of the rival lines of steamers to California, it is said, are flooding San Francisco with more people than can find employment, and the newspapers of that city are beginning to complain of the rapidly increasing surplus of population. They say trade is dull, wages low and provisions high, and that persons of limited means, who are able to raise money to get out there, find themselves unable to get back. They deny also that San Francisco is any longer a "new country," in the sense of needing fresh immigration.

THE Fremont (Iowa) Times says: The grasshoppers have hatched out thicker than ever. The ground froze solid last winter with no snow, but they hatched. The prairies were burned over, but they warmed themselves by the fire, and came out healthy. It rained and they looked refreshed. Wednesday night we had a snow storm that would have killed any common critter, and Thursday morning we saw the little cusses pelting each other with snow balls. Like Daniel Webster, they 'aint dead yet.

THE NATIONAL BOARD OF TRADE.—Arrangements have now been perfected for the meeting of the National Board of Trade, and Philadelphia has been selected as the place, and the 3d of June the time for the meeting. A number of Philadelphia gentlemen have been appointed to receive the delegations, and in the name of the Philadelphia Board of Trade, and the merchants, manufacturers and citizens, to extend to them a becoming hospitality.

PRESIDENT LORD, of the Indianapolis, Cincinnati and Lafayette Railway, has concluded a negotiation, a combination, by which the control and direct property interest in the North end of the Louisville, New Albany and Chicago Railway—that part of the road between La Fayette and Michigan City—passes into his hands. This will give the Baltimore and Ohio Railway a connection with Chicago, via Marietta, Cincinnati and La Fayette.

THE Manitowoc (Wis.) Tribune, of April 16th, comes to its readers with its local columns in mourning for thirty-one of its citizens, who perished on the fatal morning of the 9th of April. Among the list are the names of some of its most prominent old residents.

THE Chicago Railroad Gazette says that a special train on the Illinois Central Railroad, a few days ago, made the trip through from Cairo to Chicago in ten hours and ten minutes, including all stoppages.

—Col. Tabor Naphegyi, a Hungarian author, has been arrested at New York on a charge of swindling the firm of Powell, Groes & Co. to the amount of $50,000, through a forged letter from Reverdy Johnson. Naphegyi was formerly an agent of Santa Anna. He was held to bail in $10,000.

—The chair factory of Peterson & Robinson, Cincinnati, was destroyed by fire Wednesday morning. The fire communicated to several adjacent dwellings, which were speedily destroyed. The total loss will amount to twenty-eight thousand dollars. Insurance, eight thousand dollars.

—The total of the receipts from nearly all the collection districts in the United States proves the revenue for the last five months to be at the rate of one hundred and twenty million of dollars per year, or thirty million less than the estimate made by Special Commissioner Wells.

—It is stated that the Congressional Democratic Executive Committee unanimously passed resolutions requesting the Democratic National Committee to reconsider their previous action and issue a call for a Presidential Nominating Convention, to meet in New York early in June. It is probable a Congressional caucus of all the Democratic members will shortly be called for the purpose of making the same request. A meeting of soldiers held at the Fifth Avenue Hotel, New York, agreed upon supporting General Hancock as a candidate for the Presidency, and urging the calling of a Democratic Soldiers and Sailors National Convention.
